The Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion Award is open to any graduate student whose research or creative endeavor is focused on issues relevant to diversity, equity and inclusion in their field. Examples include:

- Focus on underserved populations or inequalities.
- Addressing issues relevant to DEI, such as race, gender, diversity, ability, sexuality, religion, nationality, citizenship status, health disparities, educational access, political engagement, economic justice, social mobility, civil and human rights, etc.
- Contributions to understanding of DEI issues.
- Utilizing research strategies that address variations particular to diverse populations that are typically not explored in the field.

Students wishing to be considered for this category should articulate the connection of their research or creative endeavor to DEI. The DEI aspects of the project should also be integrated into the materials presented at the Graduate Exhibition.
